About Us

Room Redux is a nonprofit organization that focuses on transforming the rooms of children who have experienced trauma, including sexual or physical abuse.

This can be a powerful tool to foster healing, as many times abuse occurs in a child's room or bed, making the room itself feel unsafe. As a result, children may stop sleeping in their own bed or start acting out. They may also become depressed, avoiding their room entirely. Through donations and grants, Room Redux fully transforms children's rooms so they will begin to feel comfortable, secure, and loved.

A New Room = A New Start

More Information

Children in need of a new room are referred by counselors, social workers, and psychologists. Room Redux then works with these professionals and the child's parent or caregiver to tailor a specially designed room, incorporating the child's favorite colors, activities, animals or sports teams, etc., along with the tools they and their counselor have utilized in therapy.

Highlights such as positive affirmations, water features, and lighting are all taken into account in order to transform the child's room into their dream space!
